Post-doc / Senior researcher in European Politics and Integration

The European Politics group does research on European integration as well as EU politics and governance broadly defined. Current research includes projects on differentiated integration, decision-making, external governance and Europeanization, democracy in the EU and EU democracy promotion. The group is committed to theoretical and methodological pluralism and to providing researchers with a stimulating environment and the means to pursue excellent research. For further information, see www.eup.ethz.ch.

We offer a post-doctoral researcher position for two years, renewable for up to six years. We are looking for a candidate who holds a PhD in political science, preferably with a focus on European politics and integration. Post-docs are expected to develop their own research projects, raise external funds, and create their own research teams. The successful candidate is expected to teach in English at the Master level. The starting date for the position is October 2011 but negotiable.
